Background

Sian Roberts, AIA, is a partner with the Miller|Hull Partnership where she has led design teams on civic, educational and infrastructure projects throughout the Northwest. Her projects include administration buildings, public safety buildings, independent K-12 schools, branch and central libraries and a variety of infrastructure projects. Her projects have won AIA awards for design, the innovative use of BIM and excellence in design/build. Sian has a special interest in alternative delivery and has been involved in most of the firm's design/build projects. Her interest in infrastructure projects has led to architectural design and community integration work on water, wastewater and solid waste facilities.

Sian has practiced with Miller Hull since 1993. She is a licensed architect in the State of Washington, a LEED accredited professional and a DBIA designated professional. She is also on the board of the Seattle Architecture Foundation where she has developed programs for youth and works to integrate the organization's program offerings.
